Optimists' guesses of the date on which the House will rorogue have steadied on March 19.

But that is still far off, and the major portion of our pro-vincial parliament's task remains to be accomplished.

For hours at a stretch in the work-days ahead, MLAs will sit as a committee of supply, with Speaker Murray's vated seat empty, and Deputy Speaker William Speare of ficiating as chairman.

During these periods, the mace which is the symbol of a House in session will rest on its brackets below table-top level, there to remain until some piece of legislation is up for debate.

Full formality is then re stored-Mr. Speaker back on his perch, and the mace lifted to its blue velvet resting place by white-gloved sergeant-at-arms Denzil Greensted Ashby.

W. ARTHUR IRWIN

Of Public Concern

THE CONFUSION BETWEEN Victoria and Ottawa over the so-called Stonehill letter has been resolved by the statement of Chief Justice Dorion.

The commissioner conducting the enquiry into the Rivard case explains that he did not officially order a halt to investigations by British Columbia agents into aspects of the controversial letter, but that he casually indicated his feelings on the matter in a brief conversation with Mr. Norman Mathews, counsel for the RCMP at the en-

The Chief Justice, who apparently under-estimates the effect of even a casual suggestion from such a source on a lawver appearing before him, voiced the opinion that the police should not question Mr. Raymond Denis, a key Dorion witness, on aspects of the Stonehill case until Mr. Denis had again appeared before the commissioner. This opinion was passed on to Victoria by the RCMP and, reasonably enough perhaps, interpreted as an official instruction.

But this incident is now a thing of the past. And in any case, the condition governing delay-Mr. Denis' re-appearance before the enquiry-has now been fulfilled. There remains no understandable reason why Attorney-General Bonner does

The name of the premier of this province has apparently been signed or affixed without his authorization or knowledge to a letter whose content suggests intervention in the affairs of the immigration department. Since Premier Bennett is the chief servant of the public in this province the public has a right to know the full facts regarding the whole affair, how completely the premier was dissociated from the incident, whether or not the signature was used as a normal procedure or was an isolated case, what steps will be taken to safeguard in future abnormal use of the premicr's signature and the authority that accompanies it, and what charges will be laid if wrongdoing is proved.

Mr. Bonner's record of alacrity in pressing legal matters that threaten embarrassment of the government is not outstanding. Delay and obfuscation have too often seemed to be his real intention when events have pressed too close to home. Now is the time for the Attorney-General to clear up the questions, doubts-and latterly suspicions-which his extended silence has caused. LACK OF DIRECTION IN MOSCOW

By EDWARD CRANKSHAW

Nobody at the Tiller?

T IS not often that the Soviet policy- of China; but they wanted to take the I makers are visibly at a loss. No theat out of the quarrel matter what hesitations and doubts, what They also wanted to sharp disagreements, are indulged in behind the scenes in Moscow, the Russians usually manage to present an image of purpose and direction, though sometimes gloomy, sometimes manic.

But during the past few weeks there has been no apparent direction at all in Soviet policy. The recent Asian tour of Mr. Kosygin was the first big initiative in foreign affairs by the new Soviet leadership. But it has done little to clear up the confusion and uncertainty that have surrounded Soviet foreign policy since the fall of Mr. Khrushchev.

At home Mr. Kosygin's first hundred days were markedly and deliberately ndynamic, as though in reaction to Mr. Khrushchev's reckless plunging. Inside Russia a good deal more was going on than immediately met the eye. It was plain that the new men, blessedly pre-served from the necessity of fighting an election, were determined to damp down dramatic adventures and curtail the search for panaceas, substituting for Mr. Khrushchev's constant, exhilarating, but sometimes irritating uproar a term of controlled and quietly speculative experi-

This has already led in some important particulars especially in agriculture and industry—to internal changes of a more radical kind than the professional radical, Khrushchev, could bring himself to contemplate.

In the international sphere, too, all was quiet. The message was that for the time being the new men intended to keep their lines open with America, eschew revolutionary heroics, and hold the line against the Chinese.

This was much too negative to last, Sooner or later something had to be

Moving to Break

When he vanished in October Mr. Khrushchev had brought the Soviet Union to the point from which it was briskly moving towards a final and demonstrative break with China and something like a tacit alliance with Only the Goldwater spectre laid until November, was slowing this movement down.

Mr. Khrushchev was also making a quite new approach to Bonn. He was apparently eager, to split the Communist movement irrevocably in the Great-Power interests of the Soviet

His successors had ideas about what ought to be done at home: tentative, fairly bold and experimental. It is possible to be tentative and experime inside a closed society without creating

But in the international sphere it is hard to see a clear line behind first their quiesence, then their sudden activity. Khrushchev had a policy; Mao Tse-tung had a policy: these were in head-on conflict. How to find a way in between? It is proving difficult.

There is no doubt that the new leaders were determined to cultivate Mr. Khrushchev's special relationship with Washington (here for once that phrase does make sense!), but without appear-ing to give ground. They were deter-mined to keep Russia's end up in face

They also wanted to resume their rightful place as the acknowledged leaders of revolutionary forces everywhere—without, however, actively leading them anywhere. The excursion to North Viet a very good idea. But was it?

At that particular moment of violence it was a bad time to demonstrate too sharply against America. It was good to show the world, including China, that was still taking a proper interest in Asia.

But would this please the Chinese, who had already long won over North Korea and seemed to be gaining decisive influence in North Viet Nam? A little carefully tempered, defiance of America could hardly be expected to bring . Mao a great deal more.

Nam and North Korea must have seemed

Where is Mr. Kosygin now? Back in Moscow with nothing much changed and nowhere evident to go. There are only a few days now to March 1, which should have been a climacteric but which looks like being one of the forgotten dates of fateful conference of 26 Communist Parties already postponed from December 15 and intended by Mr. Khrushchev to be a preparatory meeting for a grand conference of all the parties which should read China out of the Movement. The Russians are stuck with it, but the day approaches it is clear that if the conference takes place at all it will amount to no more than a facesaving operation, deciding nothing ex-cept to decide nothing.

The recent Warsaw Pact meeting, which was intended to smooth out the differences between the East European Communist Parties, was in this sense a failure. The differences remain.

The new men have checked the rush towards the West initiated by Khrushchev, but they have put nothing in its place except for a complicated holding operation, designed to avoid upsetting a delicate balance. Can they, in fact, really hope to continue this opera-tion without reversing the whole trend of Soviet policy since the death of Stalin, particularly since Cuba, and risking calamity for themselves?

A Nervous Concord

sides Britain and France are forging ahead with joint construction of the Concord supersonic airliner project. "We consider co-operation essential to meet American competition," said an official spokesman here.

Impartial observers say the Concord is proving to be much more successful in either side had dared hope. In parliament the French minister of trans port, M. Marc Jacquet, confirmed that the project would continue to dominate the civil aviation budget and that nearly £3 million was earmarked for the Concord in 1965.

He also spoke of the 150-200 seat sub sonie air bus "The Galleon", which Mr. Roy Jenkins, British aviation minister, ioned in the British parliament as another Anglo-French project under condiscussed the Concord and the air in London on Tuesday, Feb. 16. On the Concord it was stated they had "noted with satisfaction the excellent progress made and reaffirmed their intention of pressing on with the program.")

Hurt Feelings

But the French still feel hurt over fairly recent events, for example, Britain's first Comets. "We thought it was a good aircraft so we played the game," said the spokesman. "Air France and UAT (Union Transport Aeromaritime) were the first companies to buy it. When we produced the internationally-competi-titive Caravelle powered by British Rolls Royce engines, Britain didn't buy one We also bought Viscounts, but in 20 years Britain has taken only 17 Allouette helicopters, one Paris executive jet and a few Rallye four-seaters, which is like buying bicycles."

British have not shown much confidence in the French aviation industry. It must be said, however, that French industrialists react in much the same way to Britain's set-up. "I never knew we had a modern aircraft industry until I visited British factories, saw the manpower wastage and the obsolete facilities," said an industrialist.

France's aircraft industry employs 90,000 workers, and on this basis is about one-third the size of Britain's. Her 1964 exports at £107 million are only a little below the British figure, and the statistical evidence shows that France may overtake Britain shortly. It is the output per man and the French ability to meet their delivery dates which makes their industry so competitive.

Aircraft Pioneers

1909, when Louis Bleriot became the first man to fly the English channel, the French organized the first international air show in Paris. At the outbreak of World War I they had built up the vorld's biggest aviation industry. the planes used in the war were French.

Between the wars France's technicians still maintained a lead but were commercially and industrially weak so that the industry slipped badly. During the German occupation the French reckoned they lost the equivalent of 10 years in the aviation race, and had to make it up when the industry restarted in 1945. By 1950, after a five-year glut of proto-types, French companies had started to produce. By 1955 not only did the industry meet France's military and civil needs, it was also looking for exports.

With the Caravelle in 1960 the French broke through. A spokesman for the in-dustry told me "no one had faith in our ability to produce, deliver on time and give after-sale service until the Caravelle. Today 43 per cent of our output is exported to 54 different countries."

The range of French production, of which 32 per cent is civilian and 68 per cent military, is enormous. It includes light planes, commercial transport, ex-ecutive jets, supersonic fighters and bombers, helicopers and trainers as gram in the Western world outside the

Debates Rare

The decentralized, part - nationalized and part private-owned industry, which includes companies like Sud Aviation and Marcel Dassault, is co-ordinated and guided by government ministries. It is rare for a single aircraft project to be debated in parliament, as in Britain. The six-year development of 110 Mirage III vertical take-off fighters is already budgeted for ($500 million), which is more than the Americans are spending on a vertical take off aircraft. It was passed in the National Assembly with

"We would buy British engines with our eyes shut," said the official. But French technicians are skeptical about Britsh airframes which, they say, are sometimes rushed through before they are fully proven.

But there is one enormous hole in popular acceptance

Thus the prevalence of sceptical and cynical reactions to such ordinarily dependable patriotic cliches as this one uttered by President Johnson at the height of the latest Viet Nam flareup:

We love peace. We shall do all that we can in honor to preserve it — for our-selves and for all mankind. But we love liberty more, and we shall take up any challenge, we shall answer any threat, we shall pay any price to make sure that freedom shall not perish from rugged Lincolnesque Americanism to the realities of life in the totally foreign cul-ture of Viet Nam, where the people have had the misfortune never to live under the Magna Carta let alone the U.S. Constitution.

The American newspaper reader has seen enough to make him suspect that terested mainly in the freedom to be left alone. The reader sees frequent photo-graphs of Viet Cong prisoners being subjected to water torture, and of being beaten by South Vietnamese government troops while American soldiers stand

Tragic Pictures

In the pictures are always the hapless peasant refugees, wandering to and fro while their infiltrated villages are eliminated or sobbing over their youth who died in no cause with which they can identify. One of this week's cable photos bore the following caption: smoke rises from her burning village, a Vietnamese woman holds her child and weeps while pleading with a government the village of Troops burned the village when someone from the town shot at them."

To the American citizen, the main difference between government and Viet Cong possession of a village is that the Viet Cong organizes things better. South Vietnamese village organization is in a state of chronic collapse, hardly surprising in a country so unable to unite in the face of a common enemy that it cannot maintain even a semblance of government for more than a few months as it lurches between military and alleged civilian rule.

Are Americans getting an exaggerated picture from their press? The factual record shows that since President Ngo Dinh Diem's murder on November 1, 1963, there have been a dozen coups, attempted coups and shuffles in the top spot, Republican Senator Margaret Chase Smith of Maine summed up a popular view when she said: "Unless South Viet Nam shows some indication of moving toward a stable government, there isn't

High Cost and Failure

It will little avail the U.S. if millions are spent and hundreds killed only to have a rescued South Viet Nam collapse into Communist arms of its own cord. Henry Cabot Lodge, former American ambassador in Saigon, acknewledged this danger in a recent inter view with U.S. News and World Report. The Americans are there by invitation of a former South Vietnamese government. Therefore "as a result of a Communist eizure of power by subversive means (Mr. Lodge's words) there could be "a and that we leave." (He thought the U.S. should ignore it).

Mr. Lodge sprinkled his interview with observations that "South Viet Nam is not a nation-state in the way we in the West understand it;" that the Viet-"does not need nationalism, as we do, to maintain his living standard: that "their loyalty is local;" that "I wouldn't think" democracy "the way re understand it" is ever possible in

So the sense of futility and hopeless ness so common here is not surprising and does not clash as much as it may seem with normal robust American anti-

NDP and Banks

According to your knowledgeable Ot-tawa reporter, Mr. Maurice Western, the New Democratic Party has made public a "grand design" for a modern constitu-tion for Canada. Mr. Western notes that Mr. T. C. Douglas has been making the claim that the constitutional crisis has come about because of consistent lack of leadership from a succession of federal governments. Into the resulting power vacuum, says Mr. Douglas, provincial governments have thrust their expanding and often conflicting claims.

If the leaders of the NDP are so con cerned about the erosion of federal wer and the expanding claims of provincial governments why in the name of common sense are they lending their sup-port to the banking aspirations of Premier W. A. C. Bennett? Mr. Walter the need to maintain federal control over banking was clear and categorical. The notion that provincial governments should be allowed into the business is intolerable to Mr. Gordon.

Spokesmen for the NDP, such as Mr. Colin Cameron, reject Mr Gordon's thesis. Yet their statements clearly con tradict their own party's claims and propositions with respect to the constitu

Deserving of Consideration

EFFORTS OF A LOCAL crafts group to establish itself as a part of the Bastion Square redevelopment program should meet with every encouragement from City Council.

This is just the kind of project which would make the square the atraction for tourists and residents alike which was originally conceived by backers of Bastion Square's renaissance. It has the potential, properly handled, of making Victoria a focal spot on the West Coast for handicrafts of all sorts.

Having put considerable money into the Bastion Square redevelopment, the city must necessarily take economic considerations into account when it comes to allocating space in the buildings. The organizers of the Arts and Crafts Guild would like to take over the whole Board of Trade building and run it on a non-profit basis after paying a nominal rental to the city. This aspect of the plan will require careful study but there should be proper concern for the aesthetic and other intangible benefits along with the straight financial returns.

In it Mrs. Murray gives the Premier praise for accomplishments during his long term of office. But, like a good prize-fighter, while feinting with her left, she delivers an uppercut with her right.

Not once did she miss the mark. Her punches are hard enough to jolt, if not to jar. She starts with a question-what could a person say in such a situation?

Then she answers herself: "I would congratulate Premier Bennett on having lived to be a legend in his own lifetime . . . compliment him on holding the limelight and being returned premier four times - two of them with thumping majority."

Now she throws her first upper-cut: "I would also tell him he didn't have to fight to win the first one because he had it handed to him by a confused and jittery electorate and that after six years of coalition of which he was a part, he showed quick wits and good psychology to walk across the floor."

Next she likened the Premier to P. T. Bar-'Nearly everyone can fool some of the people all of the time or all of the people some

She congratulated the Premier on being able to those years "to wrap more debt and

How can Woodward's Guarantee quality at such low prices?

Woodward's can guarantee choice quality in their own name brand products because we always pack a Higher Grade than we show on the label. All Woodward's food products are made to rigid standards because we put our reputation right on the line when we put our own name on a canned food label. And how can we offer them at low prices?

... Because our policy is one of over-all low pricing and because folks buy our products in such volume we can sell them at low prices. Stock up now with Woodward's own brands.

Tall Tales Abound in Maple Leafs' Luncheon League

Weekly hockey luncheons of Victoria Maple Leafs have become popular affairs with city sports enthusiasts and they never fail to produce numerous tall tales. Listening to lacrosse story from Shamrocks' manager Hec McNeill (right) are curling addict Bill Dillabough (left), former tennis star Bud Hocking and Oak Bay councillor Fred Hawes. Evidently it's not a serious yarn.

There's good reason for expression of disbelief stamped on face of Maple Leaf coach Rudy Pilous. He's listening to account of golf exploits by Bert Saxon (right). Obviously enjoying it all at Ingraham Hotel Tuesday is Joe Evans, former hockey player with Victoria Cougars who is now sharp-shooter on fairways. (Times photos by Irving

By SHIRLEY POVICH (The Washington Post)

WASHINGTON-The New York Yankees are suddenly aware of the need to improve the image of the best baseball team in the American League.

Success on the playing field, which used to be the short cut to popularity, no longer suffices. The Yankees have won five pennants in a row, yet are running second to the Mets as a drawing card in their own home town.

This is intolerable to the Yankees, because the Mets are a joke outfit with three last-place finishes to their discredit. The clowns have been beating the artists in the competition for the New York fans' baseball dollar. So the Yankees, often accused of being too coldly corporate, have adopted new promotional tactics.

In an effort to humanize their ball club, the Yankee brass have been organizing flying squadrons, conveyed in club president Dan Topping's private plane, to make forays into neighboring Pennsylvania and Connecticut towns. There the Yankees are giving exposure to their name players in the offseason, hoping to win friends and influence fans to attend more

Winning has not been de-emphasized by the Yankees. This is still high in their plans. But they have discovered that the fans' enthusiasms also run to personalities on a more intimate basis than the aloof character of Yankee teams of the past. Mets have proved that skills are not an essential to

Fans Share Casey's Frustrations

The Yankees' ownership is probably ruing the day it decided that Casey Stengel, at 70, was too old, and fired him. Without Stengel, there would be no Met team outdrawing the Yankees. He has been the rallying point for Met fans. share the frustrations of Stengel, who once capsuled his own plight by exclaiming, after a bad inning, "Can't anybody here play this game?

Stengel and the Mets have capitalized more on fan-pity than the Yankees have on pennants. There is a natural disposition, anyway, for fans to identify themselves with the underdog. The test may come for the Mets when they are a better team and their fans will become more demanding. Then will come the question, can the Mets survive success? But that season appears remote.

The Yankees, who used to scowl at any organized uproar

In the stands and all but frisk the game-goers for any placards they tried to sneak into the park, are now inviting them to come with banners. The Mets' fans for three years have been distinguished for their gay banners. Now the Yankees have decided to be less sedate.

It is a sort of civil war in New York on two fronts. The York football Giants, decades, are now deeply aware of their own challenge from the football tenants of Shea Stadium. The Giants, once believed impregnable, are understandably jittery over the inroads of the New York Jets, their once-scorned rivals for the fans

New Stadium Factor In New Trend

The Giants' owners have been shaken by the competition offered by the Jets of the American Football League who, under owner Sonny Werblin, have been grabbing off not only the bulk of the newspaper space in recent weeks but are an increasing force in the city. This has happened at a time when the Giants won only two of 14 games, their worst season in Werblin is the shrewd businessman, bon vivant and big spender who took over the defunct Harry Wismer franchise two years ago and last season put an average of 43,000 fans into Shea Stadium for the Jets' seven home games. The Giants still sell out their 62,000 seats regularly but they no longer the town to themselves.

The Giants, in the wake of their two-victory season, were forced to brace for another shocker when Werblin un-bundled $400,000 and signed Joe Namath as his quarterback for next season. Scarcely had the Giants begun to wonder how to offset this publicity-grab when Werblin followed up with a $300,000 for Notre Dame's John Huarte as back-up quarterback.

Three years ago it was never envisioned that the Yankees or football Giants would be given any concern by the new teams in town, the Mets and the Jets. But it has happened. Shea Stadium, new, attractive and accessible, has itself been a factor in the new trends of New York fans, especially in con-

Yankees' and Giants' owners have found themselves opposed as well by big-dollar operators. Joan Whitney Payson who owns the Mets, has much to be unstinting with, and Werblin's resources are greater than the Giants' ewners. So are his tendencies to spend them.

"We seem to be getting away from that system . Many agree with Mr. Carlow. Too much emphasis was placed on one tournament (the B.C. Amateur) last year. That was obvious when the selectors ignored Victoria's Bill Wakeham, the defending champion, B.C.'s team fin ished fourth, 26 strokes behind cup-winning Saskatchewan.

Regardless of the system, controversy is bound to creep into the selections. It does every year. But the old system, controversy and all, did produce several championships.

The BCGA might do well if it heeds John Carlow's plea. The B.C. Amateur format, incidentally, has drawn m criticism but it does have the blessing of former Willingdon Cupper Laurie Kerr. The new format inaugurated last year at Kelowna calls for 72 holes of medal play with the low eight scorers stepping into match play.

City engineer James Garnett, chairman of the technical advisors to municipalities participating in the study, said to spend up to $70,000 for the professional plan, which Mr. Garnett expects could be completed within a year.

The engineering consultant to get the job should be named early in March, Mr. Garnett

He said there are about 14 serious contenders for the award, specifications for which ward, specifications for what have been advertised locally.

Ultimate aim of the area is to put sewers under an authority responsible for the entire region out-dated plaster walls. During my spring cleaning, I happened to knock the broom handle against the wall and a jagged bleee fell-off, revealing a bare wooden stud behind it. I donned hat and coat immediately and went downtown to shop for something to help in the emergency.

In one store I discovered just what I was looking for. It is saic tile—small, decorative bits of washable ceramic selling for $1.10 per square foot.

It's just perfect for my needs as I wanted to cover the areas around my tub and wash basin, the worst offenders. Years of account hy the and wash ossin, the worst offenders, fears of account hy the and water-splashing had loosened the original plaster and caused it to fall away easily. With this new tile, you simply stick it, with waterproof cement, to the surface to be covered. A whole new wall appears, washable and decorative.

These tiles come in a variety of colors and patterns. This slore has them in pebbled styles, or fleeked designs. You can buy tones to match colored bathroom fixtures, too.

The waterproof, cement I just mentioned is priced at $3:20 a quart and the quart will cover the entire area of a bathroom. Special ingredients make it impervious to water and its application is easy, with no mess to clean up.

If you have a coffee table (for an example of the mosaic's versatility) that perhaps has some eigarette burns or scratches on the top, why not cover it with a layer of these tiles? It will make the table a real conversation piece. The tile is treated

And while I'm on the subject of decorating, I also noticed floor covering for kitchen or bathroom to prevent stiletto heels from marking the floor. It also needs little or no waxing. What a wonderful idea for a bathroom, when water is splashed all over, collecting dirt and leaving water marks!

This program has never been submitted to the federal government for approval under ARDA.

MINISTERS UP

The barb brought two cabinet ministers to their feet and a few minutes of noise and fury to the house until Speaker Murray threatened to "take appro-priate action" unless members ettled down.

Before order was resumed Provincial Secretary Wesley Black had accused Dr. McGeer of calling Mr. Richter a liar and Mr. Richter had reasserted that the plan had been submitted to Ottawa and rejected.

Outside the house Mr. Richter said that a full study of the river project was made by provincial ngineers and their reports subitted to ARDA engineers in the first step of an application

"But they told us that as there as not a great deal of agriculure in the area it could be put forward as a project but would rate low priority," he said. "The only thing we could do was move forward so we con-tinued our plans under the Water Conservation Act."

WHITBREAD:

'Treat Disturbed Children'

Preventive treatment for mentally and emotionally disturbed school children could reduce the high juvenile delinquency rating according to Metro Health chief Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread. In his annual report, Dr.

Whitbread said: "Delinquency is only one facet in the overall emotional and mental health problem which exists in many of our preschool, school and teen-age children.

"There are many emotionally disturbed children who will not and do not become delinquent children.

He said prevenuve health services have been sup-plied by the public health ser-plied by the public health services for years, but due to lack of adequate consultants the pro-gram has been "seriously handicapped."

THIS AREA HIGH

Dr. Whitbread noted the Community Welfare Council report on juvenile delinquency last proportionately high compared with other areas.

A survey conducted by Metro Health last year showed 600 potential emotional or mental problem children within the district, now serving some 163,545

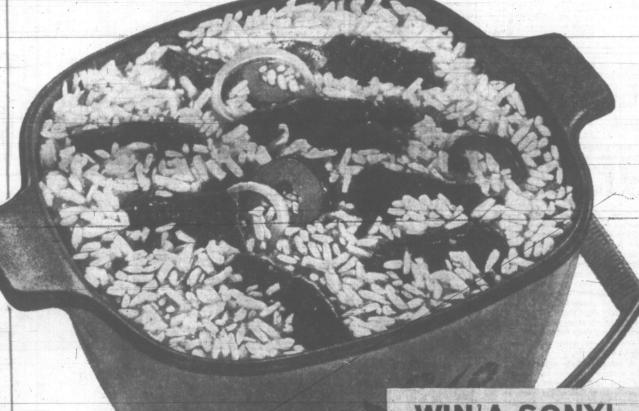

"We feel we should have some of these specialists (psychiatrists and psychologists) available to counsel the children, teachers and parents.
"In many cases it is in the home that the problem lies," Dr. Whitbread said. Greater Victoria school board is budgetting for school psychiatric counselling this year.

VOICE OF BROADWAY

By DOROTHY KILGALLEN

Lex Barker, who was married to Arlene Oakl for a year so way back in 1951, is on the verge of trying wedlock again. This time the lucky girl is Maria del Carmen Cervera-"Miss Spain"—and the ceremony is supposed to take place this month in Barcelona, if religious difficulties don't intervene—Carol Channing's ex-husband, Alex Carson, is headed for a divorce from Mary Jane Fenton Stevenson, Palm Beach, after a brief try at harmony. Everything is expected to be amicable; they just "weren't suited" for each other ... Weeks and weeks ago, those who knew Nat King Cole well were aware of the inevitable sad ending, and the stories that members of his family hoped for a recovery have a ring of fakery that the beloved singer would not have liked. He never had a chance, and they all knew it—even before he underwent surgery. Now Capitol Records is reissuing all of his albums (there were more than 20) and Nat's fans are rushing to buy half-a-dozen at a time

Mike Cowles, at the suggestion of the state department, will visit Viet Nam. His trip will be "exploratory and unofficial," in case you find it fun to interpret governmental gobbledygook . . Rita Hayworth's romance with All Ipar-once married to Virginia Bruce, who was once married to someone else—appears to be finished. Rita's chums think the reason was geographical; Ali likes to stay in Europe and she digs travel.

Jerry Lewis, the comedian, is a darling guy but he needs new advisors. His current color-photo advertisements are unfortunate to put it mildly. Making fun of the physically afflicted is not funny. . A Long Island hotel man has offered to take over the World's Fair, on lease, after this season. He claims he has enough backing to run it on a permanent basis, a la Disneyland. But it is not Disneyland.

and there is no reason for him to imagine that he can pry it from Robert Moses . . . Quote from Connie Francis:

"What's my professional ambition? That's easy. I'd like to get recognition as a comedienne. Some day soon I'd like to play a comedy role with no singing whatsoever. To me it seems the biggest thrill any performer can achieve is to make other people happy by making them laugh."

City hall reporters might ask Mayor Wagner why he has not filled nine vacancies in the criminal court judiciary when crime is at its peak in our town. He has had time to escort mink-clad ladies to social functions, but apparently the pressure of business has kept him from making the judi-cial appointments. Andy Stephen Looks at TV

Stephen

If you missed the Danger Man series on CBC-TV Monday, don't despair. Patrick McGoohan and his delightful foreign intrigues will return to Channels 2 and

6 on April 5. The program, according to a CBC spokesman, was hung up by a writer's strike in Britain but will return to its 9 nm. slot April 5 programming in the hallowed balls of the publicly-owned network have filled. the period with an excellent documen-tary series on the Second World War-

In fact, the first installment, Battle of Britain, was rung in on the viewer without too much warning. It was a very welcome change of pace from the tedious half-hour comedy series Monday evenings. There have been many documentary film series shown on the fighting during the Second World War. This is the first time CBC-TV has decided to use this one-hour David L. Wolper-produced series. Again facts and film have been neatly catalogued so the task of learning history via the television route has been made easy and entertaining. Wolper seems to have captured the documentary market, making the most of the literally hundreds of thousands of feet of film at his disposal. Most of it comes from the archives of the countries involved in the world conflagrations and the rest captured from the enemy.

In Battle of Britain it was made crystal clear Adolph Hiller lost because he underestimated the in domitable will of the British people and the tenacity of the Royal Air Force.

It documented the dark days of 1940 from the activi ties of a peaceful people to their will to withstand and survive in the face of the onelaught of massive Nazi Bottom of the Sea) Basehart, leaned heavily on the recorded speeches of Winston Churchill. Rightly so, for as history proved, Churchill met his destiny during those days. The RAF first met Nazi air power during the six days of the Dunkirk evacuation, May 27-June 4, 1940. Its activity allowed 320,000 British and French troops to be cleared of the Continent's beaches. Scenes of dogfights and planes exploding in the air taken by gun-mounted cameras on aircraft involved have been seen many times before but never in such dramatic sequence.

The most striking point made was that the blitzing of London was ordered by Hitler after the RAF bombed Berlin in retaliation for German bombers who had, by error, dropped some bombs on London.

Another point was that Hermann Goering, chief of Nazi air machine, underestimated the effectiveness of Britain's radar defences. Next week: France-Conquest and Liberation.
